“As a creature of American fiction, the successful business executive is often not a pleasant person. Sacrificing friends, family, love, and principles in his lust for success...

“On the other hand, there is David Jones.”

—Louisville Courier Journal columnist John Ed Pearce

“The story of our creation of Humana starts with a favorite phrase: ‘the confidence of total ignorance.’ Each of the endeavors we undertook—nursing homes, hospitals, insurance—was something we knew absolutely nothing about. Our start to what would become a Fortune 50 company was like something out of an American Dream book.”

—David A. Jones

Welcome to a diamond-shaped island named Dragon's Lair, the homeland of the mischievous twins, Adam and Evette, who spend their days bullying their friends and causing trouble. The twins always spend their school holidays at their grandparents' coastal house. One day, their grandfather tells them the story of the dragon that protects the secrets of the cave, and it sparks the twins' curiosity. They decide to investigate the caves by the beach, and this adventure takes them through life-changing experiences. They discover mysterious and magical treasures, encounter danger, and learn the importance of caring for others.

Join Adam and Evette on their quest in The Magical Eggs on Dragon's Lair by Gina Sano.

— Luwi Nyakansaila, Readers' Favorite

Gina Sano's The Magical Eggs on Dragon's Lair is an entertaining and whimsical novel about precocious twins Adam and Evette. The story takes place on an enchanting island that used to be inhabited by dragons, according to legend. Will Adam and Evette find the three magical eggs?

— Maria Victoria Beltran, Readers' Favorite

The storyline is straightforward with a gentle balance of adventure and child-like activities in every chapter to remind one of the importance of good morals.

— Essien Asian, Readers' Favorite

Filled with humor and emotion, The Magical Eggs on Dragon's Lair by Gina Sano is a fantastic book about the twins' adventures. It is an excellent book to spark joy and imagination.

Susan A. Savion taught as a reading specialist for many years. She has penned four teacher resource books before her published book, Quoting Matilda: The Words and History of a Forgotten Suffragist.

With her passion for historical figures, the author takes readers into the minds the most important figures in the women's suffrage movement, particularly of the hardly recognized Matilda Joselyn Gage. Quoting Matilda features the life and works of Matilda as well as the abolitionist movement. The book emphasizes the significance of women's studies. It is a product of the ample research and time the author poured into this reference and historical read, which is evident in every page of this book. The book is described by professional reviewers as thought-provoking, engaging, and moving.

The Crystalline Planet is a captivating tale set in the vastness of space. The story focuses on childhood friends Sam and Christopher who are separated when Christopher goes on a secret mission to the newly discovered planet called Iloora. With no news of Christopher's mission, Sam sets out to find his friend. He delves deeper into the mystery, uncovering the secrets that the planet and his own father are hiding. With intrigue and political undertones at play, Sam begins to question if his friend has become a part of a mesmerizing planetary tribe or if something more sinister is afoot.

This book is an enlightening science fiction that professional review bodies describe as a meditative journey that uncovers the meaning of enlightenment and your own essence. It is the first book of the series with the two upcoming other books Crystal Cavern, and Crystal Children.

R.M. Dalton has a unique talent for crafting engaging and inspirational stories with likeable, relatable characters. These three books are simply a beautiful read, where you will end up smiling and satisfied.

This is not your conventional trilogy. Each book stands alone yet is entwined with the others. R.M. Dalton invites us into a wide world of imagination and uplifting tales. The first book, The Sisters' Story is a classic fairy story but twisted, aimed for a youthful readership. The second book, The Boy's Story is an adventure story with links to the first book, and the third book, The Pale Thin Man is set in the same time as the others yet is more diverse and complex.

The books are historical romances set in the past that may not be especially accurate, but Dalton asks his readers to just enjoy them on their own terms. R.M. Dalton started writing for his church bulletin, then began The Sisters' Story for his children's amusement, eventually culminating in this delightful set.

A Heritage of Making Ideas Matter

Since 1950

An inspiring autobiography of the man who founded Humana, gave away most of his billion-dollar fortune, and managed to get home for dinner almost every night.

“Change is constant and a blessing in that it blunts the deadly sin of complacency. The world is always turning, the system is evolving, and those who do tomorrow what they did yesterday are likely to be caught short.” — David A. Jones

“David Jones was the single most influential friend and mentor I’ve had in my entire career. I’ve never forgotten what he told me when I was starting out: ‘The most important word in the English language is focus.’”

— U.S. Senator Mitch McConnell

“David cared about one thing more than any other: helping people. He brought many new ideas to health care, and Humana and the people we serve benefited every time.”

— Bruce Broussard, CEO, Humana

“You name a successful initiative in this community, you can bet David Jones was in the mix somewhere.”

— Jerry Abramson, former mayor of Louisville

“His long relationship with the Yale Law School was not about the pride of mutual prestige but about unleashing transformative potential. Because of his leadership and investment, this is a more inclusive, impactful, and innovative place.”

— Heather Gerken, Dean, Yale Law School

“I’ve heard it said that your mind grows by what you bring in, but your heart grows by what you give out. This was certainly true with David Jones, who possessed one of the biggest hearts I have ever had the pleasure to know.”

— Rev. Kevin Cosby, President, Simmons College of Kentucky, and Senior Pastor, St. Stephen Baptist Church
